Chapter one: The Visitor

Berk- The Night time Visitor

A jet black streak flys, like a shadow in the night sky, above the forest. Unknown to any of the sleeping Vikings, or dragons below.

A figure rest's upon the creatures back.

The figure looks down upon the village, before seeming to find what it is looking for. Then setting down into a hidden cave; just walking distance from the cove. While this was happening, an unaware hiccup and toothless are lying asleep, upon their beds of wood and stone. Unknowing to the fact that there lives are going to be changed forever.

Berk â€“ Hiccup

It was a normal morning, unfortunately for me, that meant being woken up when the sun rises by an overly playful and overly awake toothless. I rolled over "come on toothless it's my day off, let me sleep" I grumbled but as always he didn't. So, I gave up and got up unwillingly.

While I got ready toothless waited outside for me, I could hear him, he was getting impatient as I took my time. I smiled to myself. I came outside and was greeted with an amazing sight; the sun was reflecting off toothless' black scales, it looked amazing. Then I saw his face which I was then greeted with an impatient looking toothless. I held back a laugh and asked " so then what do you want to do, that is so important?"

I knew the answer of course, because I enjoyed them as much as toothless did. But of course I would never let toothless know that or he would end up waking me up earlier. He gave a unimpressed sigh and tilted his head towards the saddle that was hanging up. "I'm on it, I'm on it." I said before strapping it to his back and then I climbed on myself. This always waked me up in the morning; put me in a good mood.

It was time for our morning flight that we did every morning.

Berk â€“ Toothless

Toothless sighed and tilted his head towards the saddle, he did this every morning.

His human hiccup was intelligent compared to others of his kind, but he was useless in the morning and it did not help that he was always grumpy when he woke him up early. Even though he pretended not to enjoy it; toothless knew that his human hiccup enjoyed their morning flights as much as he did. Toothless gave an impatient growl, he wished he could talk to his human hiccup as he would tell him to stop being a so lazy.

When he eventually got on his back, toothless got ready to take off this was the best time of the day to toothless he loved it. No sooner than he had got ready to take off; he heard the click of his tail being put into the right position, they were off before any Viking or dragon was even up.

Toothless loved this; he and hiccup alone without any worries or anyone else. He has so much trust in his human that he closed his eyes, so that he could have a minute to bathe in the morning air knowing his human would not crash. He gave a happy purring sound. he only did this to hiccup, toothless never did this when over people were around. After that he and hiccup played until the sun rose and they had to go back to berk.

In The Forest- The Night Time Visitor

Meanwhile, in the forest below the night time visitor watched the boy and his dragon intensely, while they played and acted as if brothers. The night time visitor held their dragon close by, while watching the boy.

This may be harder than we thought the visitor said to their dragon before slipping back into the forest making no sound. The night time visitor made up their mind they would go flying at night time; for now they had to get ready for the big introduction.

Chapter two: Astrid's Discovery

The academy- Hiccup POV (first person)

Even though it was my day off here I was stuck annoyed, looking after the other riders and keeping them out of trouble by teaching them stuff they don't listen to anyway.

I had come back from my morning flight with Toothless to be faced with my angry dad telling me that the twins had blown-up a yak field. So that's how I am stuck here in the academy instead of exploring with Toothless.

Snotlout was reflecting the sun off his medal and the twins were completely focused on the spot of light. Angrily I shouted at Snotlout to stop it. All the other teens looked up at me. Toothless looked up at me intently when he heard me shout.

"What's up with Hiccup" one of the twins whispered to the other I was too annoyed to see which one it was. Astrid looked closely at me and then said "what's wrong".

I looked up annoyed and retorted "I'll tell you what is wrong, today was my day with no duty's but now I have to spend it looking after all of you because you can even look after yourself"

With that, I stormed out of the academy and into the forest and Toothless followed me. I sat down and turned to Toothless. "What's happening to me Toothless? I know how the twins are why did I snap" I leaned against Toothless and stared into the sky.

Forest- Toothless POV (third person)

Toothless was watching his human Hiccup intensely. His human was leaning against him and after a while he had fell asleep. He did a lot of times lately as Toothless sense that his emotions were all over the place at the moment.

As he was thinking about this, Toothless heard something shift in the trees to his right. He raised his ears to listen more. He would have gone to check what it was, however I did not want to wake Hiccup up so I just lay still.

A few minutes later his human Hiccup woke up and saw Toothless tense and asked "what's wrong?" this annoyed Toothless loads as Hiccup knew he could not answer him and this annoyed Toothless. So he gave Hiccup an irritated look. To which his human responded to say "what". Toothless could not help it; he gave what his human called his "rare Toothless smile". Toothless laughed before he was hit by a flimsy tackle off Hiccup to which he responded by tackling him to the ground where they wrestled.

Toothless soon forgot about the thing he had heard in the forest stalking them and wrestled the day away with his human Hiccup.

Forest-Later in the day- Astrid POV (third person)

Astrid was walking in the forest looking for Hiccup. She had not seen where he had gone, but she assumed that he had gone to the cove. That was where he and Toothless normally went. She went to the cove only to find that Toothless and Hiccup was not there.

However, she saw that they had been here recently as there was footprints on the ground and no one else went here.

Astrid had been just about to leave when she heard voices heading her way. She did not recognise the voices, so Astrid hid to see what they were up to. It was a girl and a dragon. A Night Fury. 'Wait is that Toothless' Astrid thought to herself.

"Come on, time to get something to eat" the girl said to the night fury. Astrid watched from above, and they did not see her or know she was there. The girl looked at her dragon before saying "we will have to do it soon".

Why is Toothless talking to this girl? Who is this girl? And where is Hiccup? All of these questions went through Astrid's head at once. Astrid looked down to try and get a clear view on them below, but she could not see them; she is just able to hear them.

Astrid slipped slightly away without making a sound and headed back to berk.

Forest after Astrid left - The Night Time Visitor (third person)

She looked at her dragon and said "come on Darkscale we haven't got all day". She looked back and as usual Darkscale was not listening.

Annoyed, she marched over to her dragon. "Come on you lazy-bones", Darkscale looked at her with a growl. Unimpressed she said "we have to get ready for our flight tonight I'm planning on flying low to see how we will be able to complete what we came here to do".

She knew as well as anyone who flew dragons that flying low in a forest at night was dangerous, but she had been sent here to do a job and that was what she was going to do"

As she and Darkscale were preparing to fly low; she looked at her dragon. She remembered how they had met.

FLASHBACK

She had been walking in the forest next to her village. She heard people shouting "I'm glad that Crystal is not here to cause trouble", so she was running away.

Crystal had not gone far before she looked back. The village was getting attacked by dragons. She herd the cry's as the village fought them.

She went to run back when claws grabbed her shoulders and lifted her off the ground. She looked up. Crystal didn't believe what she saw. It was a night fury. She had not even seen one before now. No-one had. She closed her eyes, waiting for the certain death that would become of her. But it had not and the dragon had taken her to safety, and over time they had become friends.

_Crystal had named the night fury Darkscale because when Darkscale took Crystal all she could see were the dragon's dark scales. _

And that was how they had met.
